KIDNEY'S MURDERER TAKEN TO OHIO PEN

Contented Smile Changes to Leer as Sentence is Passed by Court Monday; Asked by Judge if he Had Anything to Say, Giant Negro Club-Wielder Replies, "It's Not Necessary."

Walker Brown, 24, giant negro, is an inmate in Ohio penitentiary's death row today after being sentenced to die June 3 by Judge Joseph W. Adkins. A motion for a new trial, filed by Brown's attorney, George G. Adkins, was overruled by the court late Monday afternoon before sentence was passed.

Immediately after hearing sentence Brown was bundled into a sheriff's car and taken to the penitentiary. He had been held here since Dec. 16.

Walker Brown, with no show of emotion, no tear, no twitch of muscle, heard the ruling of the court in his stoical manner before only a handful of spectators in the court room after the trial of Lacey Adams, negro, was adjourned Monday afternoon. Brown, wearing a contented smile, was brought into the court chamber. He had a big 'chaw' of tobacco in his jaw and sat down beside his counsel and immediately began whispering to Mr. Adkins

MOTION OVERRULED

After Brown's attorney had made his plea for a new trial in which he charged four errors, the court overruled the motion for retrial.

Then came the dramatic part of the afternoon

Told to rise, the negro, his smile changed to a leer, held his cap in his left hand. After Judge Adkins read the history of the conviction and informing Brown that he had been convicted the giant colored man, blamed as John Kidney's killer, replied, "That's O. K."

REFUSED TO TALK

Judge Adkins then informed the man that he had a right to speak in his own behalf. Never hesitating, Brown replied, "That's not necessary."

The judge then read the sentence:

Before leaving the court room Walker Brown thanked his attorney for all he had done for him

He asked if it would be possible for him to have the blue suit the state charged he purchased with a large $20 bill taken from the Kidney home. The suit was handed Brown.

George G. Adkins, Brown's attorney, asked the negro after sentence had been passed, "Do they have you right, Walker?" "No," replied Brown, "I am innocent."

The court did not indicate when he would sentence Henry Loudermilk, convicted last week.

Sentence Of Court Given To Murderer

Following is the sentence passed by Judge J. W. Adkins upon Walker Brown Monday afternoon. This death sentence is the first ever handed down by Judge Adkins and the second in the history of the entire county

The defendant, Walker Brown, having been found guilty by a jury of murder in the first degree without mercy, on the fifth day of February, 1932, and his motion for a new trial having this 15th day of February, been overruled, and the court having informed the said defendant of the contents of said verdict and permitting him, the said defendant to speak in his own behalf why the sentence of the court should not be pronounced against him, the court hereby sentences him, the said Walker Brown as follows:

"It is the sentence of the court that the said defendant, Walker Brown, on the third day of June, 1932, within the walls of the penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio, be executed by causing a current of

APPOINTMENT OF CARDOZO PLEASES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16— A complaisant senate today awaited the opportunity to overwhelmingly confirm the appointment of Judge Benjamin Nathan Cardozo, of New York to the United States supreme court.

Despite the overwhelming approval, Carbozo's nomination will be sent through the ordinary channels before a vote is taken on confirmation. It was referred to the senate judiciary committee, which may act on it at a special session tomorrow or delay its consideration until the regular meeting, next Monday, A favorable report was assured.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—The $750,000,000 insurgent unemployment relief bill, assailed by conservatives in both parties as launching the federal government upon the "dole," faced a final vote in the senate today.

Rich Sportsman, Kidnaped, Fights Guard To Escape

Harry Blagden, New York, Abducted at Lake Placid Five Days Ago and Held for Ransom, Assaults One of Captors and Makes Way to Cleveland; Had been Drugged, He Charges, after Giving Description of Men.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb 16— Harry H Blagden, wealthy New York sportsman kidnaped for ransom five days ago from Lake Placid, N. Y., early today made a daring escape from his captors, who were driving him in a closed delivery truck.

After battling one kidnaper into unconsciousness, Blagden his clothes torn, his hair matted and suffering from exposure, made his way on foot to the house of a friend, Claude J. Peck, at Cleveland Heights, a suburb

HOUSE UNDER GUARD

The house today was under heavy police protection, as authorities believed from the astonishing story told by Blagden he fell victim to a nation-wide band of kidnapers.

Blagden declared he was abducted at the point of a gun at the cottage of E Roland Harriman at Lake Placid, N. Y., last Thursday, driven off in a car, and drugged. Later, he said, his captors forced him to write the ransom note demanding $1,000 from his family, which started a far-flung police hunt for the kidnapers.

His chance to free himself came today, when the closed truck in which the three kidnapers drove him stopped at a roadside restaurant not far from here, while two of his captors went to eat.

Left alone with a man he identified as "Curley," Blagden feigned sleep, putting his head on the man's shoulder

"Suddenly I punched him in the stomach," Blagden, an athletic huntsman, said. "I knocked the wind out of him and grabbed his gun. I knocked him over the head with it several times until he became unconscious, then ran out of the door of the truck."

Blagden asked passersby he met after running a short distance where he was. When told Cleveland was nearby, he walked for an hour.

He was almost exhausted, but insisted on notifying police and talking by telephone to his brother. Augustus, at Lake Placid to tell him and his 77-year-old father, Thomas Blagden, Sr., of his safety.

11 IN GANG

Blagden told authorities although the three men who originally abducted him drove him to the place where he made his escape, he saw eight other members of the kidnap gang when he was taken to a room he believed to be over a garage in Albany.

It was here that his moustache was shaved off, he said, by one of his guards.

Blagden said he was alone in the Lake Placid cottage last Thursday, plainly hearing the strains of music coming from a nearby ball attended by social and political luminaries, including ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith and Mayor James J. Walker of New York

"A man knocked on the door," he told police, "when I asked him to come in, he said he wanted to use the telephone.

"As I turned, he covered me

Mathematics

SAMUEL Isaac Krieger, a German marvel, proved to American mathematicians that figures can be tamed. Multiplication of numbers running into the millions is easy for him. Logarithms come to him after he does a little rapid work with pad and pencil. He is marvelous — perhaps the most marvelous of the prodigies who from time to time perform complicated calulations mentally.

But he has been unable to sell his "formula" for performing these wonders in arithmetic. Ordinary people are not much interested in multiplication on the higher levels. If he can make a game out of it, in the style of cross-word puzzles, he has a chance, but in the practical world he runs against the outstanding fact that profitable calculating demands very little speed.

There is a great difference between knowing how to multiply and knowing what to multiply For that matter, business addition is none too simple [illegible] with the facts and [illegible] lost money, [illegible] put two and two together and get the correct answer.

We are not a race of mathematicians, though multiplying assets seems to come easy to many. The simple problems presented by income tax returns and check-stub bookkeeping seems to most Americans tests for such men as Krieger. Mathematics is probably the least popular of all school subjects and certainly is the most quickly forgotten after graduation.

It Would Be A Novelty

LONDON too is launching a campaign against the jay-walker, but she is pursuing a method quite different from that commonly restored to in countries having more dictatorial police than the proverbially courteous London "bobbies."

Posters and warning signs employed in the London campaign are couched in the words "Please cross here." The reasons for this designation are several. In the first place, England never succumbed as much as did this country to the arbitary German system of "Verbotens." American laws, ordinances and regulation contain countless prohibitions, so it is natural for such campaign as those against jay-walking to be waged with "Don'ts" from red signs and redder policemen.

In England they order this otherwise. Their instructions are more in the affirmative and those whose duty it is to enforce those intsructions are invariably courteous, to the point that they leave the impression of having conferred a privilege instead of denying a right.

Should the London campaign prove more successful than have similar traffic drivers in American cities, it can not be adduced as an argument for the adoption here of British methods. Though a nation so accustomed to being "bawled out" by traffic cops and to "Shalt nots" might, because of the novelty of the thing, obsereve to the very letter a campaign conducted on the affirmative plan of the Londoners.

Hundred Thousand

THE constant bombardment with statistics to which the people of the United States are subjected makes them feel at times like closing their eyes and plugging their ears to more figures, but they cannot well ignore such data as come out of this year's meeting of the National Safety Council.

When they read that in all probability 100,000 persons will meet accidental death in 1932, the possibility that many of them will be among the victims should arouse interest in the forcast. A hundred thousand lives mean something.

Automobiles will cause a large percentage of the fatalities of 1932 but the auto death list will not exceed that of accidents in the home. The latter [illegible] deaths each [illegible] suffocation [illegible] Home accidents are greater [illegible] industrial and occupational accidents combined. Railroads kill and injure 8500 trespassers in a year.

Analysis of the statistics demonstrates that we are a grossly careless people, individual indifference to personal safety to others more than offsetting the reduction made in accidental deaths by organized efforts to lower the hazards incurred in industry and trade. On the face of the figures the nation must turn its safety-first and accident-prevention guns upon the home and continue to keep them trained upon pedestrians and motorists.

SYNOPSIS

Lovely Fanchon Meredith is wanted by the San Francisco police in connection with a murder committed by her sweetheart, "Tony." Fanchon did not know he was a gunman. She escapes by airplane under the name of "Smith." Aboard is Evelyn Howard, whom Fanchon had met on a voyage from Hawaii. Evelyn is going to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she never saw. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. To get away from Tony and the past, she goes to the Carstairs home as "Evelyn." A strong bond of affection grows between Mrs. Carstairs and her "niece." Collin Carstairs, the son, is at first antagonistic because of his "cousin's" Hawaiian escapades and her self-righteous attitude when his mother offered aid, but Fanchon's sincerity overcomes his objections. They fall in love. After a happy summer at Southampton, Fanchon makes her debut in New York. Collin, though realizing their relationship is a barrier, cannot resist professing his love. Fanchon cannot acknowledge hers without revealing her identity. Later, Tony locates Fanchon and informs her that Evelyn is alive, but has lost her memory. He threatens to expose Fanchon unless she introduces him to Mrs. Carstairs as "Cesare Gilli." He calls at the Carstairs home and is accepted by Mrs. Carstairs and Collin although they are skeptical of him. Fanchon has no alternative but to agree to Tony's demands that she induce Mrs. Carstairs to wear her emeralds to the Van Suydam Ball. Tony wears a Romeo costume similar to Collin's. On the way to the ball, Collin and Fanchon profess [illegible] Fanchon flies away and [illegible] Tony to get the jewels. Fanchon frustrates Tony's plans and has Mrs. Carstairs summon Collin. Tony reveals Fanchon's identity. The latter relates her story.

CHAPTER XXVIII

She told of how Tony had traced her. Forced her to meet him. Forced her to accept him. Of how she knew nothing of his plans. Of how, finally, he had told her what he had planned to do, on the night of the Van Suydam Ball. Of how she had appeared to agree and had herself made plans; had not put the drug in Collin's highball or in Mrs. Carstairs' hot milk. But had waited, listening for Tony, knowing he would be caught. Of how she had taken the revolver from Collin's study that afternoon and hidden it in her room. And put the jewels in the case so that the sound he would make in removing them would be heard.

Collin said, suddenly:

"Why didn't you go through with it? There was little likelihood that if we continued to believe you—Evelyn—we would have hunted you and your—companion, down."

She said, steadily:

"I'm not a thief. Oh I stole Evelyn's name, of course, and her position and her place in your affections. Yet, thinking her dead, I couldn't believe I had done her any great wrong. Nor did I feel I would wrong you very much either. . . . I was willing to serve you on my knees," she said directly to Jennie Carstairs, "because of the kindness, the love you showed me. And . . I . . . I loved you," said Fanchon.

Jennie's eyes were wet, she indicated Tony, sitting there, impassive, his dark face shut as hard as a clenched fist, his eyes watchful.

"You didn't care for—him?"

"No. I haven't," said Fanchon, "since . . . since I learned about him. He knows that."

Collin said, harshly:

"That can wait. Evelyn. What about Evelyn?"

Fanchon told them all she knew. All that Tony had said. About the possible brain operation. "I wanted to see her," she went on, but he refused."

Collin turned to the other man. His mother was crying, softly, in a sort of dull shock of horror and pity.

"Where is she?" Collin demanded. "I—we must go to her at once. Tonight. Bring her here. Have everything done that can be done for her. Everything."

Tony shrugged.

"I know the address," said Fanchon eagerly.

Tony spoke, smiling:

"You will not find her there. I hold her as hostage for my safe conduct. If you permit me to go I give you my word of honor—" Collin laughed aloud. Tony looked at him gravely and remarked, "Even among thieves, there is honor . . . my word of honor, that tomorrow you receive a communication from me telling you her present whereabouts."

Collin called him a brutal name, without apology to the listeners. Tony shrugged again. Collin rose, stood over him with the gun:

"Tell me at once—or—"

"No," said Tony, mildly, "you over-reach yourself, my friend. If you kill me I cannot speak. And alive, I will not speak, not until I have had your word also that I may go."

"I'm afraid!" cried Fanchon suddenly, on a high hysterical note.

"Of what?" asked Collin. His voice was very gentle. Her heart turned over in her breast. Was he sorry for her? She didn't want—pity. "Of letting him go. It means you will never be safe! He may never tell us where Evelyn is! He may—blackmail you as well. You must," she said, "give him up to the police."

"If he does." Tony reminded her, "I will implicate you and the Carstairs into the bargain, through you."

She turned a blanched face to Jennie.

"Oh," she said hopelessly, "what are we to do? For myself I don't mind. I almost welcome it. After these months of deceit and terror. Yes, I'm perfectly willing to pay" she said proudly, "but I can't bear to have you dragged through it. The sordidness—"

Jennie did not answer. She asked Fanchon a question instead:

"You say you did not see Evelyn at this address to which you went?"

"No."

"Did you ask to?"

"No. He asked me . . . if I wished to. I said, at first . . no. Then I realized what a coward I was. So I said, yes. But he had changed his mind. Later I asked him again. But he would not let me see her."

"You did not hear her, perhaps, when you went in the house?"

"No."

"And yet you were sure she was there? Perhaps she was not. Perhaps he had moved her. Perhaps—but it is best to begin at the beginning. You can recall the name of the doctor who cared for her—and you? And the town where you were?"

"Why, yes," Fanchon replied, wondering.

"Then give them to me. We will, as I have said, begin at the beginning."

Fanchon gave her the name and address. Tony's eyes were doubly watchful. Suddenly he wrenched wildly at his bonds. "Oh no you don't!" said Collin.

"My wrists hurt," said Tony sullenly.

Collin rose, and untied his hands and arms. There was nothing within reach that he could fling, could use as a weapon. "There you are," said Collin cheerfully, "but keep your hands quiet . . . I still have the gun."

"Might I trouble you for a cigarette?" asked Tony impudently, coolly. "Yours are so excellent—Racquet Club I believe—and I've none on me."

Poor School Work May Be Due to Physical Ills

Parents Warned to Watch Report Cards, Since Low Marks in Most Cases Result from Malnutrition or Defects That Can Be Remedied by Proper Measures

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

HAVE you recently inspected your children's report cards?

Are you satisfied with the school reports, or do you think there are too many poor marks?

In a recent investigation by the United States Public Health Service it was determined that physical defects are responsible for most poor school reports. Frequently they are due to too little of the right kind of food, to poor eyesight or to other physical troubles.

It is estimated that anywhere from one-quarter to one-third of the children in school are handicapped by malnutrition. This has a definite influence on the progress that school children make or do not make.

By "malnutrition" is meant the physical state that results when a child is not receiving the proper food. It means that there is a lack of the proteins, minerals, vitamins and other food substances which are essential to the normal development of bone, muscle, teeth and brain. Lack of these substances results in certain constitutional diseases, such as rickets, and tends definitely to prevent mental progress.

Every child should be assured of a well-balanced diet. It must contain plenty of milk, eggs, meat, vegetables, fruits and whole cereals.

I know you will be astonished to learn that children showing signs of malnutrition often come from homes that can afford good food. The trouble is that these children eat too little of certain foods and too much of others. The parents are most often to blame. They are not familiar with the necessity of a well-balanced and varied diet or else they neglect to apply their knowledge.

Remember that even though the food be of good quality, it should not be eaten quickly, nor between meals. Neglect of these precautions, together with too little sleep and rest, and lack of exercise, may bring on the symptoms of malnutrition.

Very often the teacher will accuse little Johnny of being lazy. Little Johnny and many of his playmates may not pay attention to their work. These children are not lazy necessarily, but because they are not well nourished they cannot function normally. Children who are not well nourished tire easily. They act slow-witted, are ill-behaved and do not show the usual signs of brightness.

Another important thing to be considered is the child's sight or hearing. Very often the child has poor sight and it is difficult for him to study, or to see what the teacher writes on the blackboard. When there is any impairment in the hearing it is difficult for a child to hear what the teacher has to say.

When overlooked and not recognized immediately, such handicaps place the child in the backward group. When the physical defects are recognized and remedied the child's school work immediately improves.

I tell you about these matters because if you have received a report card that is not satisfactory and particularly if your child has not been to a physician lately, I would suggest that you take the child to one.

Have the eyes and ears examined. See that the tonsils are not unduly enlarged, and that there is no difficulty in breathing because of enlarged adenoids. Have a complete examination, and see if it is not possible to improve any physical defect that your child may possess.

If you do this, you will immediately see a change in the school progress. You owe this to your child, and I am sure you are glad to do everything possible for your child's welfare.

INSURE CORN CROP DAIRYMEN TO TOUR

Pickaway-co corn growers who have selected their seed corn, culled it over carefully and are now shelling, grading and testing this in preparation for the next crop are naturally thinking of those other practices which will increase their crop returns.

In stretching the fertilizer dollar the experience of recent tests favor the hill application of fertilizer for corn in obtaining maximum returns for each bag used. Leading Agronomists and corn growers have found that the use of from 100 to 125 pounds of a well selected complete fertilizer in the hill for corn has generally given greater returns than a much larger broadcast fertilizer application. In tests run by Purdue Univesary, Le Fayette, Ind. through 1929 -30-31 the average increase for the three seasons was 11 bushels increase per acre for the 125 pound application.

Most Implement companies have satisfactory fertilizer attachments for their corn planters which apply the fertilizer in bands at the side of the seed. Fertilizer formulaes well adapted to Pickaway-co conditions are: 2-12-6; 0-14-6; 4-12-4; 4-24-12 or 0-28-12. Hill applications of fertilizer give the corn seedling a start before soil organisms have a chance to function efficiently in providing nutriment for the corn seedling. This early start many times means the difference between corn profits and a crop failure.

WILL WED THE GIRL HE TRIED TO MURDER

DORTMUND, Germany — A European tragedy, much like Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy," will be crowned by a happy end when Hildegrad Schwiersch, 23, marries her would-be slayer, Albert Michalski, 26-year-old miner, in the prison of Dortmund, Westphalia.

Michalski told the police he entered into a suicide pact with the girl because her parents refused to consent to their marriage. He threw her into the Weser-Ems canal and then when she struggled hurled a brick at her. But his nerve failed, he said, when he wanted to jump in to down himself.

Two sailors rescued the girl, whose favorable testimony in court got Michalski off with a six-months sentence on a charge of assault with intention to kill. They will be married despite parental objection.

Theatres

AT THE GRAND

The next attraction at the Grand Theatre, beginning Tuesday, is without doubt one of the most unusual motion pictures ever shown in this city.

It is "East of Borneo," and for the making of the exterior scenes an expedition from the Universal studios spent six months in the jungles of Sumatra and the Malay Peninsula. The result of this trip brings to the screen a drama told in the world's most exotic setting, and the climax of the picture shows the most awe-inspiring volcanic eruption ever captured by the camera.

The cast of this great picture is headed by Rose Hobart and Charles Bickford, and also includes Georges Renavent, Luprta Tovar, Noble Johnson and hundreds of native Malays.

Don't miss this most remarkable of all screen dramas.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Much-heralded and mysterious Lil Dagover makes her initial bow to American audiences in "The Woman From Monte Carlo," the First National and Vitaphone production which comes to the Cliftona Theatre tomorrow.

Lil Dagover

Miss Dagover, recently brought to this country from Germany, is slight, dark, clfin—with unfathomable green-ish-brown eyes, an elegant nose, a subtle mouth, and that altogether indefinable charm spoken of as 'continental.' Born in Madeoin, Java, Dutch East Indies she made her first dramatic appearance at twelve in "Joan of Arc." Rated abroad as first lady of both stage and screen she has played a wide range of parts. Among her important foreign pictures are "Destiny," "Tartuffe," "Red and Black," "Empress Catherine," "A Hungarian Rhapsody" and "Madame Bluebeard." She considers her role of Lottie Corlaix, heroine of "The Woman From Monte Carlo," her best to date with a revolver and commanded me to put my hands up.

"I was escorted to a waiting sedan outside in which two other men sat, and forced to get in."

Blagden was not permitted to take either his hat or coat, and was without them throughout the time he was a prisoner.

"After driving several hours," Blagden continued, "the car pulled up at a sideroad and the men took out a lunchbasket.

"I said I was not hungry, but was told I would be killed unless I ate and drank something they said was beer.

"After I drank the stuff, I lost consciousness

"I woke up in a room without windows and with only one door. I believe it was in Albany, over a garage.

WROTE RANSOM NOTE

"The kidnapers came in and asked how much money my family had and whether they could pay $1,000 for my return. I told them I thought they could."

Blagden was then forced to write a ransom note, and told to sign it "Henry Harrison Blagden," although his first name is Harry. It was in this room that Blagden saw the other eight members of the kidnap ring.

"We were in that room about two days," Blagden said. "Then we drove off again, in a closed sedan similar to the one in which we started. Once I recognized from signs that we were in Syracuse."

Soon afterwards, Blagden was transferred into the delivery truck, riding in back with "Curley," while his two other husky captors, who he said were called "Zeke" and "Jimmy," sat outside.

Another halt was made for a day at a small farm house whose location Blagden declared he could not identify.

Blagden thought it was some time Sunday night he was again ordered into the truck and driven off.

Throughout the rides, he related, he planned to take the first opportunity to escape, but saw no chance until he was left alone for a while with "Curley."

Suffering mainly from nervous shock and exposure, Blagden was expected to recover completely after a few days rest.

He furnished police with a fair description of his kidnapers, and this was broadcast immediately by the authorities.

Two of the men were about 6 feet tall, "Curley," the smallest, being about five feet nine, Blagden said. Neither of the three appeared to him to be of the gangster type as they spoke in well-modulated voices and were well, but not flashily dressed.

Ohio Cage Fives Near Tourney

COLUMBUS, O, Feb 16.— With only a few games of none too great importance remaining on their schedules high school cagers throughout Ohio focused their eyes on the championship tournaments which begin in about two weeks Class "B" schools step into tourney competition this weekend but "A" schools hold off until March 4

Most of the schools have encountered their greatest hurdles and from now on will take a "breather" until the important title diminations get underway Then the fun will fly because the strength of teams, which have remained outstanding during the season has at last been challenged North High of Columbus saw an unblemished record fall before East and numerous other dark horses have shot forth to create interest as well as worry to many a proud and confident coach

EAST IS BOOSTED

East High's startling upset placed it on a par with North as the outstanding team in the central district

In Southeast Ohio Portsmouth, last year's champions, and Pomeroy appear to be the class of the group Evidently the farther south one goes, the tougher it gets, because the southwestern district has four squads with title aspirations Moreover, they have displayed the brand of ball in recent games that is likely to carry them a long distance on the trail Although Davton Stivers has been conceded a slight edge, Hughes of Cincinnati Norwood High and Springfield are nipping at their heels in an envious fashion

Toledo Waite and Sandusky share honors in northwest Ohio, but even there a number of other teams are pressing closely

While Akron West is undefeated in the northeastern district, its spotlight has been shared with Alliance and Massillon. Both of these quintets have established enviable records and they appear to possess the necessary punch for the final journey.

A real struggle is in the offing in the eastern district where four teams are about evenly matched. For a while Zanesville and Marietta were prominent but now East Liverpool and Cambridge, by defeating Columbus Central, have edged in on the monopoly.

An indication of what may be expected from class "B" teams will be obtained from the results of the county carnivals.

The record gate receipts for any one baseball game was established by Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals at the Yankee Stadium, New York, during the world series of 1928. The intake was $224,130.

PURDUE WHIPS BUCK CAGERS

Boilermaker Squad Too Versatile For Olsen's Team; Score 43 To 26.

LAFAYETTE, Ind, Feb 16— The perfectly-clicking Purdue basketball machine today had earned the right to battle Northwestern for the Big Ten lead Saturday night by trouncing Ohio State here last night, 43 to 26 The defeat lowered the Buckeyes into sixth place

The Ohioans could not seem to fathom the Boilermakers' fast-breaking offense and air tight defense, and the Indianans had the game on ice by the time the end of the first half rolled around, when the score stood 27-10

Capt Hoffer and Mattison, two of Ohio State's leading scorers, kept Wooden and Eddy, Purdue's scoring aces, bottled up all evening, but the Purdue team again demonstrated that it could not be stopped by the guarding of one or two stars The well-balanced Boilermaker five scored consistently, from the top of the lineup down

Lively and Colburn, Ohio's speedy, midget forwards were the outstanding stars for the Buckeyes, although Brown garnered scoring honors with seven points.

Wooden's flashy floor play was the outstanding feature of the game although his scoring was hampered somewhat by the guardmenter both guards, led the way in scoring with nine points apiece. ing of Hoffer Wooden and Pa...

Conrad and Theis, Ohio centers, were again out-jumped by smaller men, and this lack of controlling the tip-off was one of the big factors in the Buck's defeat.

COURT YEAR WANES

COLUMBUS, O., Feb 16.—Now that only two weeks remain of the basketball season Ohio colleges today were out to accomplish everything possible Seven games an unusually large number for the early part of the week will be crossed off tonight.

Wittenberg will get its chance to take a step nearer Depauw, Buckeye league leaders, against Ohio university at Ada. Ohio Northern likewise, can gain a march on Mt. Union, which heads the Ohio conference, if it can topple Heidelberg. Muskingum plays at Kenyon, Baldwin-Wallace at Kent, and Akron at Ashland in other loop games.

Dayton hopes to end its losing streak at Wilmington, while St. John's and Toledo will fight for the championship of that city.

"How do they do it?"

Among your friends there's sure to be at least one smart young married couple who are the envy and admiration of all who know them.

With an income that is frankly abbreviated, and with no benevolent Aunts in the offing, they still have a home that is correct and comfortable in all its appointments, a home that is admired and copied by their friends.

"Yes, Jane is a remarkable little manager," will probably be the young husband's proud answer. And there is little doubt about it.

Take a look around that home and you will find no end of well-known advertised products. For Jane is an efficient little manager. She can't afford to take chances that must only be debited to "Experience." When she buys for her home she must get tried and tested and trusted products which carry an honorable name to guarantee her satisfaction.

You will find that Jane is a consistent reader of the advertisements. Are you?

Monday Club Joins National Bi-Centennial Celebration

The regular meeting of the Monday Club which was held in the club room Monday evening was opened by the president, Mrs R R. Bales, who read the beautiful Washington Prayer that was written in 1783.

Mrs. Charles Gerhardt, who had charge of the very interesting program honoring Washington, introducted Mrs. Paul A. Johnson as the first speaker, whose subject was "The Youth and Manhood of Washington." Mrs. Johnson spoke of the American Washingtons, John and Lawrence, who came to Virginia in 1657.

Colonel John, an Indian warior, was the great-grand father of George Washington. Augustine Washington born in 1694 was the father of George Washington. His mother was Mary Ball . George Washington was born Feb. 22 1732. He received his eduction in Virginia and his early school copy books emphasize the boys deep seriousness of character.

At sixteen his school was over and he turned to the city to the study of surveying. In this he could make sufficient money to keep his mother and five younger brothers and sisters. In his young manhood he gained experience and knowldge in Indian warfare.

At forty three years of age Washington was made Commande-in-chief of the continental forces. Pages of history preserve the main events of the Revolution. On April 14 1789 he was elected first president of the United States and served faithfully two terms. Lincoln said, "To add brightness to the sun or glory to the name of Washington, is alike impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe pronounce the name and in its naked deathless splendour leave it shining on."

The next speaker, Mrs. Helen B Anderson, told of "Washington, the Mar of Sentiment," "The Son," "The Country Squire" and "The Husband."

Of his mother Washington said, "All that I am I owe to my mother." "Honored Madam" was Washingtons salutation to his mother in all his letters. "Remember that God only is our sure trust To him I commend you," with these words Mary Ball Washington sent her son to the battlefront

At the age of eleven he inherited the family residential farm on the Pappahannock river Nine years later he was serving as executor of Mt. Vernon which he later inherited.

Washington married Martha Danridge Custis Jan. 6 1759, For ty years of happy married life was the fortune of these two, most of which were spent at Mt Vernon. Washington was a home loving man with a home keeping heart. He gave his two step children a father's love and care.

He was a lover of music and purchased Nellie Custis, his step grandchild, a harpsecord, which she often played for her adored "Grandpa," the gallant and glorious General

At this time in the program, Mrs. Theodore Huston in colonial dress, played on the piano some of George Washington's favorite selections, "Battle of Trenton," "Beneath a Weeping Willow Shade," "Sonata," "Minuet," and "The President's March"

Following the program a social hour was enjoyed . Mrs. Orion King, Mrs. R. F. Lilly and Miss Emily D. Yates were highly complimented on their decorations of the club room. Its walls were hung with flags and lighted by many candles. Portraits of George Washington held places of honor. Robert Kline dressed in George Washington costume gave each guest as a memento, a picture of Mt. Vernon.

Members of the excutive committee who served tea were in colonia' costume. Many beautiful heirlooms had been brought from old trunks and in the flickering candle light gave a touch of long ago, to a delightful evening.

"Washington's a watch word such as ne'er

Wearer of the proud title, "Miss America," a few years ago, Dorothy Knapp, beautiful showgirl, is today seriously contemplating taking the veil and spending the rest of her life in cloistered seclusion far away from the world, the flesh and Earl Carroll. When Miss Knapp was "knocking 'em dead," at a time when she was on the pinnacle of pulchritude, Earl, the Knight of the Bath, brought her to Broadway and built her up as a footlight favorite, climaxing her climb to fame with a stellar role in his musical comedy production, "Fioretta." It happened that this show was "angeled" (financed to you) by the wealthy Mrs. Frederic Courtland Penfield, who makes a hobby of using her millions to dabble in such things. Life was just a bowl of strawberries for Dorothy until Mrs. Penfield saw the show one evening. Then came the raspberries, for the wealthy "angel" ordered the noble Earl to dismiss the prize Venus. The result was a law suit against Mrs. Penfield by Dot, charging breach of contract and asking $500.000. But Dorothy's tears, instead of helping her with the jury, merely ruined her make-up. Furthermore, in a moment of absent-mindedness, she had declared that she had not received her $1,000 salary check for the last three weeks she worked for Carroll. It required the cashier of the bank to jog her memory into an admission that she had been mistaken. It was then that the judge informed Dot that the highest valuahe could put on her claim was 6 cents.

NEWS OF HOMES AND HOME FOLKS

Published by STEVENSON'S

VOL. 3. NO. 7. Tuesday, February 16, 1932

Some folks get the impression that when they want to purchase a real good piece of furniture that they must trot off to some distant city, taking their money out of the community in which they live. Of course, that is their privilege, but it's not at all necessary. For instance: Last week a lovely dining room suite was delivered to a home in Roundtown. The legs and heavy parts of the suite were in SOLID MAHOGANY. The tops, fronts, and ends of the table and server—the customer has a built-in buffet—were MAHOGANY veneer. And was it beautiful with an inlay around the top of the table, across the front of the chairs, and on the drawers of the server? Well, words cannot describe the loveliness of that suite. AND IT CAME FROM STEVENSON'S, right here in old Roundtown.

Here's the housewife's opportunity to secure a rug at a very low price In checking up our rug stock, we find that we have entirely too many velvet rugs on hand. So, here's what we're going to do We're going to offer them to you at a price that is the lowest that we've ever seen We're offering 14 room-size velvet rugs as follows:

1 6x9, today's price $15.00—we'll take $10 00
1 9x12 today's price $21 50—we'll take $14 33.
2 9x12, today's price $23.50—we'll take $16 67.
5 9x12, today's price $28.00—we'll take $18 67
2 9x12, today's price $29.00—we'll take $18.33.
1 9x12, today's price $39.00—we'll take $26 00
2 11-3x12, today's price $40 00—we'll take $26.67.

Here's fourteen room-size velvet rugs marked down to today's prices and offered to you at ONE-THIRD OFF. These are offered subject to prior sale and, unless we miss our guess, they won't stick around our store very long at these prices Perhaps you don't need one right now, but why don't you pick out one or more and have us lay it aside for later delivery? We'll do it for a small deposit. THESE FIGURES ARE GOOD FOR ONE WEEK ONLY

'Tis said that Charley (Nosey) Myers the paint-slinger, was painting the side of a house, standing high on a ladder. A young lad inquired what he was doing, and Charley said "Oh, I'm painting the clouds with sunshine."

"Well," said the boy, "if I pull the ladder from under you, you'll be painting your face with iodine."

We've told you, in former issues of RTT, about those dandy axminster rugs at $26.00. It seems that those that take the trouble to look at them, after seeing the quality of the rug, as well as the colors and designs, become "sold" upon the rug and have us deliver one to their homes. Just last week two more ladies had us deliver their rug purchases to their homes. Right now we have another order for more rugs. Within the next few days, our stock will be larger than ever.

It's hard to beat Circleville when it comes to furnishing leaders in state organizations. There's Howard Orr president of Ohio Canners' Association; Frank Lynch, president of Ohio Bottlers' Association, and now there's talk of putting Mary G Morris in as president of the State Business & Professional Women's Club. Hot ziggity! Circleville is getting on the map

Remember that story that we told in last week's RTT about the Roundtown family that purchased a so-called "heatrola" and couldn't keep their feet warm? Well, the wife and mother was in our store before that story was published and told us that her floor, at and near the base of the Estate Heatrola, was perfectly warm What a contrast! Both heaters were made out of the same kind of materials, but the Estate is designed to put the heat where it belongs—on the floor. We know that there will not be many weeks of stove-weather, but now's the time to really enjoy "June warmth" with a genuine Heatrola. Unless this month and next are different from the many that we have passed through, you'll find some mighty disagreeable days ahead of us before the "Johnny-jump-ups" stick their beautiful heads through the earth.

* * *

It's getting so that oil cook stoves are used the entire year. With so many furnace and Heatrola heated homes in the country districts, country folks are using more and more oil, gasoline, and Pyrofax Gas ranges It was one day last month that a lady from up Five Points way dropped into our store and ordered one of those new Super-Burner Perfection Kerosene ranges sent to her home She came into the store last week and told us that she was just mighty well pleased with the performance of the range As she said, it is so easily lighted —No pre-heating, no waiting, no adjusting of the flame, just tilt back the chimney, turn up the wick, apply the match, lower the chimney, and—you're through. What a contrast! (We like that expression). No coal to carry, nor kindling, nor ashes.

* * *

And then, there's that Pyrofax Gas Service! What a wonderful method of cooking and baking for country folks! Any family, no matter how far they live off the gas mains, can have a modern, beautiful, and efficient gas range in their kitchen—an Estate gas range, if you please. No bother to fill tanks, pump air, no waiting or adjusting—just turn on the gas and light it. How about the cost of operation? We've letters from our users to show that the cost ranges from 50c to $1 each week, depending upon the amount of cooking and baking. What is it costing you for coal or oil? What is it costing you in bother and dirt and odors in the use of coal and oil? Pyrofax gas eliminates all of the dirt, fuss, and odors. Talk it over with us—we're willing.

Overheard in a Circleville restaurant

Miss C. McEwing: "I feel sorry for that man over there."

Miss M. Palm: "Why?"

Miss C. McEwing: "The poor chap has eaten his salad with his spoon, and now he has to eat his soup with his fork."

* * *

And now, before we bid you farewell, let us remind you that beginning right away, and good for ONE WEEK ONLY, we're offering you our stock of VELVET room-size rugs at ONE-THIRD OFF TODAY'S LOW PRICES. Only 14 rugs on sale, which is subject to prior sale. During the war days of a few years ago, these rugs sold for $60 to $65. Now you can buy them for about one-third of that price, if you'll buy during the coming week.

How a factory can produce furniture at prices that are prevailing today is beyond us Just one day last week we received a four-piece—bed, vanity, bench and chest of drawers—in walnut veneer and other hardwoods, decorated beautifully with veneers of rare woods, for the very small sum of $66 00. And it's a suite that will fit into any home, too.

The opening gun of the George Washington 200th Birthday Celebration will be fired in Circleville on Monday night with Chief Justice Marshall flying the opening sho' at Memorial Hall We'll be open all day, ready to serve you, but at night we'll expect to see you at the celebration.
